Felicia Fowler, ’16 MS
Major: Recreation Management and Policy: Therapeutic Recreation Administration
Hometown: Barre, Vermont

Felicia Fowler embodies the spirit of a committed and dedicated leader that plays many roles on campus, including student, graduate assistant and rowing coach. Throughout her undergraduate career at UNH (’09-’13), Felicia established a presence on campus as a compassionate and joyful individual who devoted her time and energy to the RMP department and the UNH Rowing program. Felicia further developed her leadership skills as an AmeriCorps VISTA intern for UNH Cooperative Extension, Military Youth and Family Program. During her internship and also through her involvement with Northeast Passage, she realized that she wanted to continue her education in the field of Therapeutic Recreation.

Felicia is currently a Master’s student and graduate assistant for the Graduate School. As a graduate assistant she coordinates and plans professional development workshops and seminars for the graduate student population. This student population plays a significant role on campus in setting the tone and mentoring the undergraduate population. Felicia is an important factor in this mentoring process. While balancing her school and workload, Felicia is an assistant coach for the UNH Rowing team where she instills a positive and competitive environment for men and women student athletes. Felicia’s strong work ethic and dedication make her an asset to the UNH community.

Giselle Hart, ’17
Major: Environmental Conservation and Sustainability
Hometown: Hull, MA

Giselle Hart is motivated to leave every community she touches better than she found it. Giselle knew instantly after attending her first Student Environmental Action Coalition (SEAC) meeting that she had found her niche at UNH. Soon after, she joined the Peace and Justice League (PJL), and subsequently spent her freshman year campaigning around tar sands in New England and the abolition of the death penalty in New Hampshire. She believes activism and grassroots organizing play an important role in solving social and environmental problems.

In her sophomore year, Giselle was a student leader for PAWS, the outdoor orientation program that she attended as a freshman. She served as co-coordinator of SEAC in the fall. This spring, she ran as a candidate for student body president with the hope of bringing marginalized and under-represented student voices into the Student Senate. In the same semester, she launched the campaign for fossil fuel divestment at UNH. Giselle is also a resident and volunteer at the Waysmeet Center.

Giselle came to UNH as a music education major. However, through her involvement with SEAC and PJL, justice and social change became central to her aspirations into the future. She is now pursuing a degree in Environmental Conservation and Sustainability.

Rachel O'Sullivan '18
Major: Recreation Management and Policy
Hometown: Seal Beach, CA

Since committing to attend UNH, Rachel O'Sullivan has dedicated herself to learning, leading, and becoming involved on campus. She decided to kick off her career by attending PAWS, a pre-orientation program for incoming freshman. There she learned valuable team building and leadership skills with her classmates. She joined the Campus Activities Board (CAB) early on in her first semester and became highly involved as a Homecoming Committee member and a Winter Carnival chair. She has also volunteered with Northeast Passage and works as a lifeguard and swim instructor at the Swasey pool.

In the upcoming year, Rachel will return to the PAWS program as a student leader, and will be one of the co-directors of the Campus Activities Board. She hopes to attend more leadership programs and continue to make a difference on- and off-campus.

Rachel's love for her school can be seen through her leadership and dedication for everything she does. You can always find her learning something new, exploring places on and off campus, and putting a smile on everyone's face.

Spencer Littles, ’17
Major: Biomedical Science focus on Medical Microbiology
Hometown: Los Angeles, California

Spencer Littles is a rising junior who co-chairs the Black Student Union and is very involved with Mosaico, the United Asian Coalition, and MOSDEF (Men of Strength Diversity Education and Family). He works at the Office of Multicultural Student Affairs (OMSA) as their Say What Coordinator where he coordinates and facilitates many discussions.

Spencer participated in the MLK leadership summit in 2014 and coordinated it in 2015. He was a resident assistant in SERC C from 2014-2015 where he advised residents and help them grow. He also participated in Leadership Camp hosted by the MUB in 2015. During the summer of 2014, Spencer was an Orientation leader making friends and connections with the incoming students. Spencer also serves on the Memorial Union Board of Governors. He continually strives to make people of color feel comfortable on a predominantly white campus, and help them feel like they have a place to grow.

Jennifer Turner, ’17
Major: Social Work and Women’s Studies
Hometown: Hollis, N.H.

Jennifer Turner studies Social Work and Women's Studies and is the Coordinator at the Cornucopia Food Pantry in Durham, NH. As the food pantry coordinator, she strives to make every single person who walks through the door feel welcome and valued. She is currently running a marathon in July to raise money for the Cornucopia Food Pantry.

Jennifer is an officer for Eyes Open, the student organization that partners with Friends in Action to work with young adults throughout the Seacoast area who have developmental disabilities. During the summer, Jennifer is the outdoor living skills specialist at an Easter Seals camp for folks with disabilities, where she leads campers on hikes and in nature activities. Her commitment to service and compassion combine to help make the community at UNH a better place.
